

Love Is In Your Eyes

This particular song occupies a very special place in my heart. It's not difficult or complicated, nor is there any intricate orchestration or fancy wording. It's special to me because it's from the heart. This song represents an entry into a different writing phase of my music, that of intense vocal harmonies. I became interested in 3 and 4-part harmony and because of that I also became quite interested in the means to record and play them back - multi-track recording. It represents the beginning of my lifelong fascination with laying down multiple tracks of vocals and instrumentation and creating more complete musical compositions.

The song is also special because of the theme - the eyes are the aspect I notice first about a woman, and this song is a tribute to the mysterious and powerful look that I glimpsed on very rare occasions, and I wanted to record something of that wonderful "sparkle" that makes it special.
