

"Excellent facilitator. I am amazed at the progress everyone made during the weekend. Tamara worked with each person accordingly to what they needed." - Beverly

Tamara Lea is a professional vocalist, flautist, educator and painter. She has opened for Dee Daniels, The New York Voices and The Real Group. She performs and records in a wide range of genres including jazz, blues, gospel and pop as well as vocals for commercials and television.

What is the workshop for soloists about?

This workshop...

...is a wonderful way to experience solo singing in an inclusive environment with people like you who are wanting to get a little bit out of their comfort zone

...is for people who have little or no experience as a solo singer as well as for those who already have experience and are ready to move to another level of performance. The purpose is for us all to see where our voice can take us.

...is for people who think they can't sing. They may have been told that by some "expert" or been shut down by a deprecating comment from a peer or family member. Stories like these keep many people away from the joy and beauty of singing.

"I've not just come to a new place with my singing gut a whole new world" -Ally

... is an opportunity for those who have found their voice in a choir but are fearful of singing a solo. Is it time to free yourself from those old, negative stories and allow the gift of singing and music to flow into your life?

...shows that everyone can sing...you can sing...no one is tone deaf! It takes practice, repetition and supportive guidance.....that's all!

Would you like a private group workshop?

If you and your friends would like a fun weekend together please contact Tamara about a performance or recording workshop.

Give the gift of singing!

Gift certificates are available. Contact Tamara for more details