Awards

Winner and/or finalist in twenty-one major screenwriting competitions in three years with three different feature scripts. Wrote, directed and acted in The Norman Rockwell Code, a 35-minute spoof of The Da Vinci Code, featured on The Must List ("Ten Things We Love This Week") in the June 2, 2006, issue of Entertainment Weekly which hailed the "whimsical, Web-based parody." The Norman Rockwell Code had its sold-out world premiere at the real Norman Rockwell Museum in Stockbridge, MA, where part of the story takes place, and had more than one million online hits in less than three months. The Library of Congress selected The Norman Rockwell Code for inclusion in its Film Collection which features works by American filmmakers chosen on the basis of their historical, cultural or aesthetic significance.
