

Singer - Songwriter / Producer
Multi-Instrumentalist Releases
His Major Work

CHRISTIAN PYLE

Nothing Left To Burn

Christian Pyles' (CP) new solo album has been an arduous journey. The culmination of 5 years of borrowed time squeezed in between making albums for countless artists, including CP's own bands Acre and Ghost Mountain, and notably the swan song masterpiece 'A Great Day For A Migraine' by Jesse Younan. Then, enduring his father's passing and his own nasty bout of cancer, all the while paying the bills, maintaining his property and caring for his family.

When that duty had been carried out, sometime in the wee hours, the important harvest arrived.

Nothing Left To Burn, all songs, written, performed and recorded by CP himself (he plays every instrument on it).

Like other astounding 'artists' or 'freaks' like say; Jason Faulkner, J Mascis, (Stevie Wonder) who have at times painted the whole picture themselves, the result is an emotionally cohesive, deeper and richer experience than your average studio release. Music is a language and Pyle has his own distinct dialect.

In one sitting you will meet all his aspects up close and brutal, delivered intelligently and melodically with gravelly alt rock swagger.

The opener 'Trees and Stone' and the following two tracks 'Wait Son' and 'Get Used To It', seemingly in a similar groove, are reminiscent of the mood of Elliot Smith... (Badly Drawn Boy comes to mind). 'Ray of Your Sunshine' marks the ascent to the edge of the water hole as you are lead into the depths of the album. The achingly no fuss remembrance of growing up in "School Without Dogs" will haunt you with it's sweet melancholy. From there the ride becomes warped, abstract and just a bit scary.

Nothing Left To Burn will get you. You'll find yourself humming melodies and busting out lyrical phrases, not sure of where they came from. Living up in the hills behind Byron Bay has definitely made this artist a unique proposition. Now if he can find time for some sleep Christian Pyle may have something going for him with this brilliant new solo release.

New Album out now thru
Vitamin Records

ALBUM LAUNCHES Sat 12 Jun Byron Bay Brewery Byron Bay, NSW
Fri 18 Jun The Federal Hall Federal, NSW
Sat 19 Jun Yamba Hall Yamba, NSW

www.christianpyle.com | www.vitamin.net.au

MEDIA ENQUIRIES: Vitamin : Nino Haggith : vitamin@vitamin.net.au | 02 6684 6633